Temple Menorah Plans Children's Consecration

Forty-four first grade students of the Temple Menorah Religious School will be consecrated during services Friday night, Oct. 27.

Rabbi Jerome Unger, spiritual leader of the congregation, will welcome the children into the study of Torah and bless each child. The class will also recite the "Sh'ma," the watchword of the Jewish faith, and sing a traditional song. Each student will then receive a Certificate of Consecration from Akiva N. Gerstein, principal of the Religious School.

Consecration will be held as part of the Simchat Torah celebration that evening. On Simchat Torah the reading of the last chapters in the last book of Torah is completed and the reading of the first book is begun immediately. This signifies that the study of Torah has no beginning and no end.

During the celebration the Torah is carried around the synagogue seven times, this circling is called "Hakafoth." Children carry flags with suitable inscriptions, rejoicing in the great heritage of the Torah.

Those children who will be consecrated are Lew Murez, Joanie Friedman, Andrew Lieber, Felice Liner, David Birnbaum, Regina Rubin, Darrin Salk, Sharon Friedman, Steven Alexander, Evlyn Platt, Susan Weiner, Cindy Jane Berman, Holary Rotstein, Joel Kaufman, Karin Reichard, Susan Eisenberg, Edward Spiegel, Dorri Ann Horowitz, Eric Savador, Dennis Allen, Laurie Bleich, William Lerner, Jeffrey Felt-

WHAT'S DOING?

By now you've received your new telephone directory. If you haven't already noticed, this year there's a whole new look in the front of your book. We've had the front pages completely redesigned and I think you'll find them easier to use, easier to understand and full of useful information about how to use your phone.

We asked hundreds of telephone users what they liked and wanted in the front pages. Using many of their ideas, we then put together such useful information as emergency numbers, area codes, how to dial direct, how to get time, and what to do if your phone needs repairing. And these are just a few of the helpful items you'll find in the new front pages.

Take a minute now to leaf through the new front pages of your directory. There's a whole new look in the front of your book . . . to make looking easier for you.

Most people are safer on the job than off the job, according to safety authorities, and they cite this fact:

FOR EVERY WORKER INJURED ON THE JOB, 14 ARE INJURED OFF THE JOB.

That statement documents the need for off-the-job safety. Drive with safety going to and from work. Follow the rules of safety in recreational areas and, equally important, follow safe practices in YOUR OWN HOME. Home safety includes keeping poisons and all toxic materials out of the reach of small children.
